Valentine's Day

When it was first officially celebrated in 469 AD it had no romantic connection at all. It was simply a day to recognize a Saint in the Catholic Church, similar to the modern St. Patrick's day. The details of who St. Valentine was have been lost over time and the day is no longer officially observed by the Catholic Church.

Geoffrey Chaucer is cited as the first author to connect St. Valentine's day with any sort of romantic actions in the following lines from 1382:

"For this was on seynt Volantynys day Whan euery bryd comyth there to chese his make."

{"For this was Saint Valentine's Day, when every bird cometh there to choose his mate."}

Valentine's Day has not always been about flowers, and candy. It was intended as a day to show love to those we care for. Don't let Valentine's day be a miserable time anticipating gifts and cards- take heart and send a note to a friend, show a Christ-like love of care and compassion.

A WORD FROM OUR SPONSOR

I know your deeds, that you are neither cold nor hot. I wish you were either one or the other!
So, because you are lukewarm--neither hot nor cold--I am about to spit you out of my mouth.
